Dear Harold,

I did a little more research on "Who 30 mins" after I found out from the ALC. (San Diego) bibliography that it was published in 1966 by Random House. Random House informed me that it is out of print, and they were unable to tell me where I could find ~~and~~ a copy of it. NBC was also unable to help, and I have yet to find a bookshop in the city which carries it including just about everyone I could find specializing in out of print books.

I did find one bookshop, however, which said they could put out a tracer on the book. I did not have them do it since I imagine it would be quite expensive and I was not sure of how important it was. If you still want the book I can have them put out a search for it.

Everything here is fine. I'm currently busy as hell working full time, taking 13 credits at night, following the Shaw trial, and trying to see my girlfriend now and then.

I certainly hope Garrison has more evidence waiting in the wings than he's brought out thus far. I'm afraid Spirel and Russo did far more damage to the state's case than they benefited it. My own opinion is that unless Garrison has a lot more concrete evidence directly against Shaw there is going to be a unanimous acquittal.

I'm also looking for an apartment, and if and when I find one you're welcome to stay at my place any time you're in town. I have to admit, though, that New York rents being what they are, and ~~from~~ my finances being in the condition they are still in, it may not be as soon as I would like before I have my own apartment.

I hope everything is OK by ~~you~~ you, and that you're having better success at finding a publisher.

It's getting late so I'll sign off. Please let me know what to do about that book.

Sincerely,
Jerry Solicoff

P.S. All the N.Y. media is mentioning the fact that the Shaw jury saw the Zapruder film today, but not one mention of which way the President's head was driven after the hit. Typical.
